Update

Our annual board meeting was scheduled for January 22. The February news will include a summary of activities in 2019 and plans for 2020 based on the annual meeting.

The LOGOS version of the EHV became available January 17.

Widening Circles—the Letter A

One of the virtues of the internet is that it enables us to introduce the EHV to a potential world-wide circle of users. By coincidence all our recent special contacts started with the letter A.

Word about EHV is getting out in widening circles. Academia is a site used by professors and grad students around the world to post their papers. The site hosts an overview paper on the EHV. Our paper receives only 1-4 readers per day, but researchers in Singapore, India, Korea, Sweden, and Australia have been among the recent contacts.

An Anglican Bible reading program produced in the United Kingdom has requested and received permission to direct people to the EHV for its Bible readings.

We recently received an order from an Amish bookstore. (We have to admit that the thought of trying to market the EHV to the Amish community had never occurred to us.) What apparently happened was that WELS members who had Amish neighbors shared the EHV with them, and they found it helpful in a time of trial and decided to buy more. The internet is good, but it does not beat the old-fashioned way—personal contact and concern.
