Spreading Ripples

Spreading Ripples is our section about increasing use of and wider contacts for the EHV. This month's Ripples focuses on new developments within the EHV series.

We encourage musicians to use the EHV text, free-of-charge in their compositions. They may use up to a thousand verses per work without seeking permission. The Heritage Psalter is one such work which is under way. For more information see the following announcement and the attachment.

THE HERITAGE PSALTER

The Heritage Psalter is a collection of digital resources available at HymnalHelper.com. It has been prepared for use by anyone, anywhere, at no cost. Features include a modern English translation (EHV) that has not been paraphrased, as well as public-domain psalm tones with rich four-part harmony designed to work with Germanic languages. For congregations that use the EHV as their regular Bible translation, this psalter allows for uniformity in translation usage.

THIS MONTH'S PICTURES

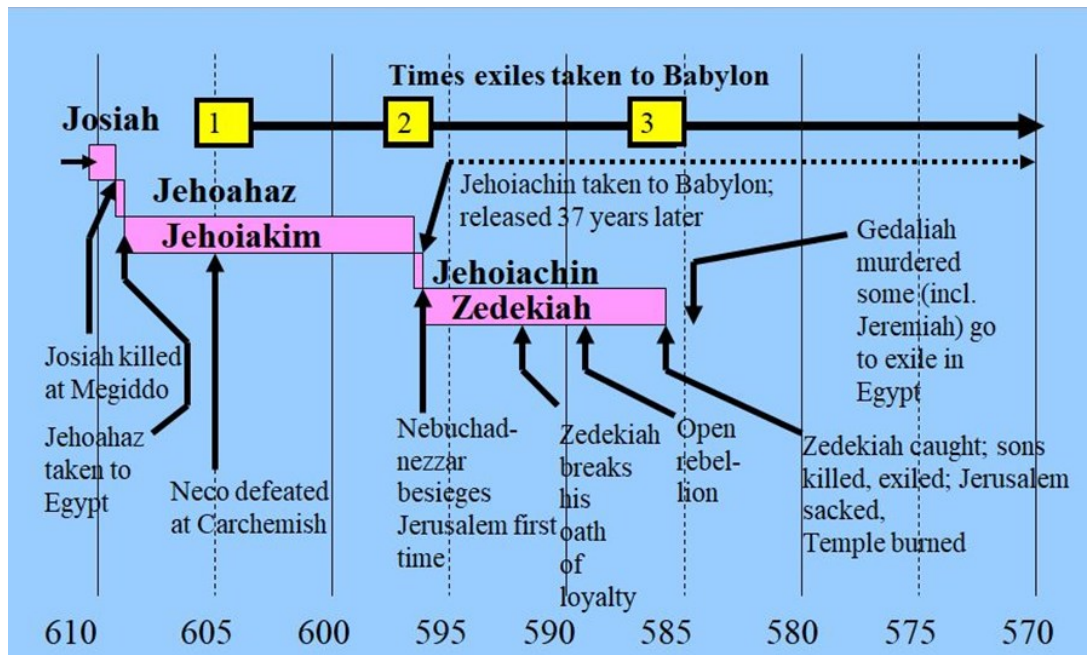

This month's pictures are from the EHV Study Bible of Jeremiah. They therefore go with this month's article.

A bulla of Baruch ben Neriah. The fingerprint (not noticeable in the photograph) is located in the highlighted area.

This seal impression from the ruins of Jerusalem contains the name and thumbprint of Baruch the son of Neriah, who was the scribe of Jeremiah. Some suspect the seal is a forgery.

This chart is of the chaotic chain of events during the last days of Jerusalem.
